Registration

Registration must be made in advance by completing the enclosed registration form. The meeting is open only to members of the Southern Garden History Society. Non-members may also be listed in the appropriate file on the form. Registration is limited to 125 members to a first-come, first-served basis.

The registration fee is $50.00, which includes registration on Friday and Saturday, including billeting, transportation, tours, receptions, refreshments, and lunch at the Omni, and Saturday's social hour. An additional fee of $50.00 covers Sunday's optional tours of Rome and Tuscany, including transportation, admission fees, and a picnic lunch.

Accommodations

Most of the Friday and Saturday activities will take place at the Charlottesville Omni Hotel, and rooms have been set aside for participants. Registration forms have been provided. The cost is $65.00 single or double and rates are also available.

Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge has been selected as the meeting place and a large number of rooms have been reserved there at a cost of $75.00. It is located one mile from the Omni, and assistance can be made by writing to Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, 1212 and 1218 Main Street, Charlottesville, VA 22902. Contact: 804-296-9121. The cost is $65.00 single, $85.00 double.

Transportation

The Charlottesville Airport is served by American Airlines and Delta Airline's Atlanta Airline. Airline service is available from Washington, D.C., and New York, New York, and American Airlines provides service to most major cities in the southern states. The Omni Hotel provides transportation service from the airport.

Gardens & Tours

The gardens are centrally located within Virginia, North Carolina, and North Carolina to provide convenient access to the Bay.

Attractions

The area is particularly rich, particularly in New Orleans, Atlanta, Charlotte and Washington. Although the schedule may be somewhat loose, there should not be too much leisure time.
Schedule: Friday, June 12

Friday's agenda begins at the Omni Hotel with three short lectures: Bill Beanergan, who has been at Monticello since 1971, and has contributed much of the garden restoration, will discuss Jefferson's theoretical vision of the landscape, particularly as seen in Monticello. Rudy Farnsworth and Peter Head will discuss the restoration of the gardens and the landscape at large from the perspective of the University of Virginia. Finally, a report on the restoration of the gardens will be given by a team of landscape architects from the University of Virginia.

Schedule: Saturday, June 13

Saturday will be spent touring and visiting Monticello, where the gardens are being restored. The full program of the day includes: "Thomas Jefferson's Vision Center," "Monticello's Gardens," and "Monticello's Visitors Center." Following a tour of the gardens, participants will be able to choose from three different activities: "Jefferson's Farmhouse," "Walking Tour of the First Residence," and "Monticello's Visitors Center.

Schedule: Sunday, June 14

The Sunday tour is optional, however, and is very excited about the two sites to be visited: Blue Ridge and Monticello.

Brenner Historic District, where the James River includes three separate but related sources all created by the Shenandoah River. General John Hartwell Cocke (1758-1806), the principal architect, was a profound influence on the design of the mansion, which was completed in 1795. Cocke and his assistants, Peter Head and Will Farnsworth, will discuss the restoration of Monticello. The site of the original mansion, which was restored in 1817, will be used as a backdrop for the tour.

Schedule: Friday, June 12

Friday's agenda begins at the Omni Hotel with three short lectures: Bill Beanergan, who has been at Monticello since 1971, and has contributed much of the garden restoration, will discuss Jefferson's theoretical vision of the landscape, particularly as seen in Monticello. Rudy Farnsworth and Peter Head will discuss the restoration of the gardens and the landscape at large from the perspective of the University of Virginia. Finally, a report on the restoration of the gardens will be given by a team of landscape architects from the University of Virginia.

Schedule: Saturday, June 13

Saturday will be spent touring and visiting Monticello, where the gardens are being restored. The full program of the day includes: "Thomas Jefferson's Vision Center," "Monticello's Gardens," and "Monticello's Visitors Center." Following a tour of the gardens, participants will be able to choose from three different activities: "Jefferson's Farmhouse," "Walking Tour of the First Residence," and "Monticello's Visitors Center.

Schedule: Sunday, June 14

The Sunday tour is optional, however, and is very excited about the two sites to be visited: Blue Ridge and Monticello.

Brenner Historic District, where the James River includes three separate but related sources all created by the Shenandoah River. General John Hartwell Cocke (1758-1806), the principal architect, was a profound influence on the design of the mansion, which was completed in 1795. Cocke and his assistants, Peter Head and Will Farnsworth, will discuss the restoration of Monticello. The site of the original mansion, which was restored in 1817, will be used as a backdrop for the tour.

Schedule: Friday, June 12

Friday's agenda begins at the Omni Hotel with three short lectures: Bill Beanergan, who has been at Monticello since 1971, and has contributed much of the garden restoration, will discuss Jefferson's theoretical vision of the landscape, particularly as seen in Monticello. Rudy Farnsworth and Peter Head will discuss the restoration of the gardens and the landscape at large from the perspective of the University of Virginia. Finally, a report on the restoration of the gardens will be given by a team of landscape architects from the University of Virginia.

Schedule: Saturday, June 13

Saturday will be spent touring and visiting Monticello, where the gardens are being restored. The full program of the day includes: "Thomas Jefferson's Vision Center," "Monticello's Gardens," and "Monticello's Visitors Center." Following a tour of the gardens, participants will be able to choose from three different activities: "Jefferson's Farmhouse," "Walking Tour of the First Residence," and "Monticello's Visitors Center.

Schedule: Sunday, June 14

The Sunday tour is optional, however, and is very excited about the two sites to be visited: Blue Ridge and Monticello.

Brenner Historic District, where the James River includes three separate but related sources all created by the Shenandoah River. General John Hartwell Cocke (1758-1806), the principal architect, was a profound influence on the design of the mansion, which was completed in 1795. Cocke and his assistants, Peter Head and Will Farnsworth, will discuss the restoration of Monticello. The site of the original mansion, which was restored in 1817, will be used as a backdrop for the tour.

Schedule: Friday, June 12

Friday's agenda begins at the Omni Hotel with three short lectures: Bill Beanergan, who has been at Monticello since 1971, and has contributed much of the garden restoration, will discuss Jefferson's theoretical vision of the landscape, particularly as seen in Monticello. Rudy Farnsworth and Peter Head will discuss the restoration of the gardens and the landscape at large from the perspective of the University of Virginia. Finally, a report on the restoration of the gardens will be given by a team of landscape architects from the University of Virginia.

Schedule: Saturday, June 13

Saturday will be spent touring and visiting Monticello, where the gardens are being restored. The full program of the day includes: "Thomas Jefferson's Vision Center," "Monticello's Gardens," and "Monticello's Visitors Center." Following a tour of the gardens, participants will be able to choose from three different activities: "Jefferson's Farmhouse," "Walking Tour of the First Residence," and "Monticello's Visitors Center.

Schedule: Sunday, June 14

The Sunday tour is optional, however, and is very excited about the two sites to be visited: Blue Ridge and Monticello.

Brenner Historic District, where the James River includes three separate but related sources all created by the Shenandoah River. General John Hartwell Cocke (1758-1806), the principal architect, was a profound influence on the design of the mansion, which was completed in 1795. Cocke and his assistants, Peter Head and Will Farnsworth, will discuss the restoration of Monticello. The site of the original mansion, which was restored in 1817, will be used as a backdrop for the tour.

Schedule: Friday, June 12

Friday's agenda begins at the Omni Hotel with three short lectures: Bill Beanergan, who has been at Monticello since 1971, and has contributed much of the garden restoration, will discuss Jefferson's theoretical vision of the landscape, particularly as seen in Monticello. Rudy Farnsworth and Peter Head will discuss the restoration of the gardens and the landscape at large from the perspective of the University of Virginia. Finally, a report on the restoration of the gardens will be given by a team of landscape architects from the University of Virginia.

Schedule: Saturday, June 13

Saturday will be spent touring and visiting Monticello, where the gardens are being restored. The full program of the day includes: "Thomas Jefferson's Vision Center," "Monticello's Gardens," and "Monticello's Visitors Center." Following a tour of the gardens, participants will be able to choose from three different activities: "Jefferson's Farmhouse," "Walking Tour of the First Residence," and "Monticello's Visitors Center.

Schedule: Sunday, June 14

The Sunday tour is optional, however, and is very excited about the two sites to be visited: Blue Ridge and Monticello.

Brenner Historic District, where the James River includes three separate but related sources all created by the Shenandoah River. General John Hartwell Cocke (1758-1806), the principal architect, was a profound influence on the design of the mansion, which was completed in 1795. Cocke and his assistants, Peter Head and Will Farnsworth, will discuss the restoration of Monticello. The site of the original mansion, which was restored in 1817, will be used as a backdrop for the tour.

Schedule: Friday, June 12

Friday's agenda begins at the Omni Hotel with three short lectures: Bill Beanergan, who has been at Monticello since 1971, and has contributed much of the garden restoration, will discuss Jefferson's theoretical vision of the landscape, particularly as seen in Monticello. Rudy Farnsworth and Peter Head will discuss the restoration of the gardens and the landscape at large from the perspective of the University of Virginia. Finally, a report on the restoration of the gardens will be given by a team of landscape architects from the University of Virginia.

Schedule: Saturday, June 13

Saturday will be spent touring and visiting Monticello, where the gardens are being restored. The full program of the day includes: "Thomas Jefferson's Vision Center," "Monticello's Gardens," and "Monticello's Visitors Center." Following a tour of the gardens, participants will be able to choose from three different activities: "Jefferson's Farmhouse," "Walking Tour of the First Residence," and "Monticello's Visitors Center.

Schedule: Sunday, June 14

The Sunday tour is optional, however, and is very excited about the two sites to be visited: Blue Ridge and Monticello.

Brenner Historic District, where the James River includes three separate but related sources all created by the Shenandoah River. General John Hartwell Cocke (1758-1806), the principal architect, was a profound influence on the design of the mansion, which was completed in 1795. Cocke and his assistants, Peter Head and Will Farnsworth, will discuss the restoration of Monticello. The site of the original mansion, which was restored in 1817, will be used as a backdrop for the tour.